

Policy for Physician Assistants Regaining Certification

To be eligible to apply for PANRE to regain certification, PAs must (1) acknowledge the regaining requirements on their personal online record (2) select the projected PANRE application date (3) log at least 100 Category 1 CME credits earned within the two-year period ending on the date the PA's PANRE application is submitted to NCCPA. Once all 100 Category 1 CME credits are logged, PAs may apply to take PANRE to regain certification, and pay all applicable fees

PAs who have lost eligibility for certification due to NCCPA disciplinary proceedings must first apply to reestablish eligibility.

PAs seeking to regain certification will be eligible to apply for PANRE as soon as they are qualified to do so as described above. If the PA fails PANRE, they may retake PANRE only one time in any single 90-day period.

Applicants must agree to abide by NCCPA's published policies and procedures and its Code of Conduct; must truthfully respond to questions about their professional, licensure and criminal background posed by NCCPA; and must agree to arbitrate any claims against the NCCPA in the event of a dispute.

Notwithstanding any of the above, NCCPA reserves the right to suspend the eligibility of any PA if the security of an NCCPA exam is in question.
